

The Three Little Pigs

Care BearsTM
Share-a-Story

Once upon a time, there was a mother pig who had three little pigs. One day she said to them, “Little pigs, you’ve grown too big to live at home with me. It’s time for you to go out into the world and build houses of your own. But you must beware of the wicked wild wolf.”

So, the next day, the three little pigs said goodbye, and set off down the road.

Soon, the first little pig had an idea.
What do you think the first little pig decided to build his house out of? Straw?
Not in this story. He made it out of clouds.
“How soft and fluffy it would be” he thought to himself. As he began his house, the other two little pigs waved goodbye and went on their way.

The first little pig finished his house very quickly. It was soft and very comfortable, but it wasn't very strong. And the first little pig wasn't happy for long. He barely sat down in his new living room when the wicked wild wolf came. He said, "Little Pig, Little Pig open your door or I'll blow till your roof falls right through your floor!"

But the little pig replied,
“No! Not by the heart on the tip of my snout!
I’ll stay inside, but you must stay out!”

With a mighty huff and a giant puff the wicked wild wolf blew the cloud house down! So the first little pig ran away to find the other pigs.

Meanwhile, the second little pig was busy at work finishing her house. Think it was made of sticks? Wrong again. This little pig loved colors, so she made her house out of rainbows

The second little pig spotted the first little pig running down the road toward her. “What happened?” the second little pig called out. When the first little pig told all that had happened to his cloud house, his sister invited him to stay

The house made of rainbows was pretty,
and very colorful, but not very strong.
The little pigs had just sat down to enjoy some rainbow sherbet when there was a knock on the door. It was the wicked wild wolf. He said, "Little Pig, Little Pig open your door or I'll blow till your roof falls right through your floor!"

But the second little pig said,
“No! Not by the heart on the tip of my snout!
I’ll stay inside, but you must stay out!”

The wolf let loose with a mighty, huffing, puffing blast that blew the rainbow house down.

The two little pigs quickly ran away to the third little pig’s house.

I bet you thought the third little pig's house would be made out of bricks—not in Care-a-lot! The third little pig made his house out of something very strong—hearts—full of love! When he heard about what the wicked wild wolf had done to the others' homes, he quickly invited them to stay with him.

It didn't take the wicked wild wolf long to find the three little pigs. Soon he was knocking on the door and saying, 'Little Pig, Little Pig open your door or I'll blow till your roof falls right through your floor!'

But the third little pig said, "No! You can blow all night, or even longer – my house is made of love, and nothing is stronger!"

Well, the wolf blew and blew but the house didn't budge.

He blew on the doors. He blew on the windows.
He blew on the walls. But still nothing happened.

Finally the wolf climbed on the roof and blew into the chimney. He blew and blew, and the house shook. The three little pigs were scared. “Quick,” the third little pig said, “let’s build a smoky fire in the fireplace.”

Just as the wicked wild wolf took a big breath to blow again, the smoke came out of the chimney and the wolf was caught in a cloud of thick smoke. He started coughing. He coughed so hard he fell right off the rooftop. Ouch! He was surprised, hurt and coughing so much that he couldn't huff or puff anymore.

The wicked wild wolf limped away and was never heard from again.

The three little pigs' house lasted year after year. No matter what came along, wind, rain, or snow, the house full of love stayed strong—just like the three little pigs' hearts!

The End.
